6 Cerritos College serves the common good by expanding the boundaries of knowledge 7 and transmitting it imaginatively, preparing students for occupations and preparing them 8 to live successfully in a free society. The fulfillment of this function necessarily rests on 9 the preservation of academic freedom which protects the rights of teachers to teach and 10 students to learn.

11 The exercise of academic freedom is necessary if society is to receive the benefits of 12 honest intellectual search and unbiased transmittal of knowledge. Cerritos College 13 scholars must be free from pressures or demands which restrict their intellectual 14 searches. The transmittal of knowledge at Cerritos College shall not be impeded by 15 special interests, conflicting public opinion, or unpopularity. Cerritos College shall avoid 16 a climate of education in which either students or faculty dare not assert their ideas for 17 fear of reprisal. At the same time, Cerritos College faculty and students have a 18 responsibility, under the guidelines of academic freedom, to engage in teaching and 19 learning that honors and respects divergent viewpoints that are grounded in cultures of 20 reason, logic, evidence, responsible scholarship, and creativity.
