For CA residents:

What is your next step to continuing your education if you have completed your Retail Management Certificate:

The most affordable first step is to pursue your associate degree and then transfer to a university. Here are some facts about the few universities we have partnered with to accept all RMC and associate degree credits.

First, I attached a handout with all 4 university partners.

Two of them offer RMC grad scholarships and discounts: U Mass Global and WGU.

They offer relevant degrees in a self-paced accelerated format that allows you to save money when you complete coursework quickly.

NOTE: They offer RMC grad tuition discounts for master's Degrees as well.

The next has no "scholarship" discount - Cal Poly Humboldt - but we were very intentional to establish an affordable seamless pathway to Cal Poly Humboldt's leadership degree through the school of extended studies. If you have been completing your AA at Cerritos online, the business academic counselors would have recommended certain courses to maximize the transferable credits.

You can take 71 credits at the community college and only 50 at Humboldt (this was our goal, to keep total cost down for the bachelor's degree).

Our 4th University partner is Grand Canyon University, who allows 80 credits through Cerritos College (or any of our Maricopa college partners) and 40 credits at GCU – to keep costs down. Fresno City College could possibly develop the same pathway.

It is impossible to provide specific details on total cost because it is so individualized, and the University Advisors are the financial experts.

The total tuition cost to go from their RMC to a bachelor's degree at all our university partners is unique to each student but could range from $14,000-$19,000.
