We will discuss how to distribute points in class.

You have a total of _____ points to divide up between your group members. Do not grade yourself. Allocate these points to the members of your group. When allocating the points, you should base them on the contribution the individual made to the project. The points do not have to be distributed evenly. If you had a person who did more than their fair share, then reward them with a higher distribution. If you had a person that did not pull their own weight, then discount the points. Your point assignments will remain confidential. (I will calculate your grade based on the completed project and based on the assignment of points made by the team members.)
