

Dayannara Aguilar

The woman who wasn't afraid to think outside of the (doll) box

There she filmed her daughter and herself playing with dolls
Exploring worlds from their minds through dolls
As she could not afford new dolls and accessories, she made her own
She posted them in YouTube, hoping to find
What she thought was her family from afar
Not knowing how many people she would soon inspire

There was a child known for her imaginative mind
Filled with stories that wanted to gush out like air from a bursting balloon
She looked into her toy box, hoping to find
What she felt was missing
But found nothing
She thought if what's missing wasn't there, then it could not be anywhere

The child felt hopeless about her lack of doll accessories
And filled her mind with frustration
Along with thoughts that felt like holding water using a spoon with holes
She looked into the endless depths of the internet, hoping to find
What she felt was missing
And found something
A YouTube channel called MyFroggyStuff
She thought if what's missing was there, then it could not be here too

The creator behind the account was Latoya Moore-Broyles
An artist that created new with stuff laying around her house like a magician pulling a rabbit out of a hat
The child ran to her desk and tried to recreate what Latoya made, hoping to find
What she felt was missing
An opportunity to bring one's imagination to reality
She thought if what's missing was there, then it also could be here

There the child had a realization
While being to hold her finished handmade doll accessory
That were made with the help of Latoya, she saw
What she thought was missing
Was found
Just like Latoya when you can't find what you're looking for in the box
Then one must think outside of the box
